Epworth League

Mount Epworth

MANY at the International Convention who passed over the Moffit road saw the splendid mountain, 13,500 feet high, officially named for the convention. Nearly all saw the magnificent painting of this mountain by Charles H. Harmon, valued at several thousand dollars and intended for the Central Office of the Epworth League. Unfortunately the plan for meeting its cost failed. It can now be secured for a price but a fraction of its value that does not compensate the painter. We appeal to the League for the necessary funds. While they last we will send a convention badge, the most artistic and expensive ever provided, to every one contributing twenty-five cents, and for every dollar we will send seven badges and a copy of the beautiful reproduction, in colors, of the original painting. Will not hundreds of our chapters send us at least one dollar each immediately and secure this magnificent painting to their Central Office for all time?
